

CLIPPINGS.

—oto—

- Getting started is half of the journey.
- Good deeds remain, all else perish.
- Handsome is that handsome does.
- Honesty is the best policy.
- If a man once fall, all are ready to tread upon him.
- It costs more to revenge injuries than to bear them.
- Jack in office is a great man.
- Jests like sweetmeats often have sour sauce.
- Keep thy shop and thy shop will keep thee.
- Keep good company and thou shalt be of the number.
- Learn wisdom by the follies of others.
- Let every tub stand on its own bottom.
- Marry in your own religion.
- Men apt to promise are apt to forget.
- Never taunt with a past mistake.
- Never open the door to vice.
- One lie makes many.
- One may say too much even upon the best subject.
- Plain dealing is more praised than practised.
- Precepts may lead but examples draw.
- Quarreling dogs come halting home.
- Quick come, quick go.
- Religion is the best armour, but the worst cloak.
- Rolling stones gather no moss.
- Saying is better than getting.
- Short reckonings make long friends.
- The burnt child dreads the fire.
- The rotten apple injures its neighbor.
- Unreasonable silence is folly.
- Use your wit as a buckler and not as a sword.
- Virtues all agree, but vices fight one another.
- Vows made in storms are oft forgotten.
- We lessen our wants by lessening our desires.
- Weak things united become strong.
- You must learn to creep before you walk.
- You must plough with such oxen as you have.

Charity begins at home, but if it ends at home it is not charity, but selfishness.

When the office seeks the man, it generally finds him. When the man seeks the office, he generally has to find himself, and pay the boys.—Ex.

The underlying cause of almost all financial distress is extravagance; of individual distress, personal extravagance; of public distress, general extravagance.

Love and appreciation are to a woman what dew and sunshine are to a flower. They refresh and brighten her whole life. They make her strong-hearted and keen-sighted in everything affecting the welfare of her home. They enable her to cheer her husband when the cares of life press heavily upon him, and to be a providence to her children. To know that her husband loves her and is proud of her, and believes in her; that even her faults are looked upon with tenderness; that her face, to one at least, is the fairest face in the whole world, that the heart, which to her is the greatest and noblest, holds her sacred in its inmost recesses above all women; gives her a strength, and courage, and sweetness, and vivacity which all the wealth of the world could not bestow. Let a woman's life be pervaded with such an influence, and her heart and mind will never grow old, but will blossom, and sweeten, in perpetual youth.
